June 21st, 1847.

We were visited on Monday night by one of the most violent thunder storms which has been known in this section of the state in many years. Its main force seems to have been spent over the city--as we hear nothing of it on either side of us--shaking the houses, prostrating trees, and killing three individuals. June 31st, 1847.

About ten minutes after 12 o'clock, the house of Mr. William Mathews, No. 28 Wilder street, just north of the Tonawanda Railroad, was struck by lightning, the fluid entering the chimney on the gable end of the house, and thence passing down the stove-pipe, through the opening in the stove door. In consequence of the warmth of the night, the feather bed had been removed to the floor, near the stove, and on which Mr. Mathews, his wife, and daughter Sophia, a little girl about 10 years of age, lay sleeping. As the fluid left the stove, it passed directly across the bed, killing the husband and wife instantly, and then made its way through the side of the house. The daughter lived until about 3 o'clock, vomiting considerable blood at different times, but leaving no perceivable injuries upon her body. The parents were slightly burned. Another daughter, Emma, slept in the same bed, or beside it, and, wonderful as it may seem, escaped uninjured.

The two sons of Mr. Mathews slept in the chamber above, and being awakened by the shock, called to their parents, but received no answer. They immediately ran down stairs, and discovered the bed on fire. On extinguishing the flames, they found their parents lifeless.

Mr. Mathews was an Englishman, about 45 years of age, and had been in this country some five or six years.

Clipping: Biography of James D. Bemis.

James D. Bemis, who became interested with Mr. Gould, in the publication of the "Repository and Advertiser," in 1804, is still living at Canandaigua. Mr. B. has been extensively engaged in Printing, Book-selling and Binding, in that village.

I will here state, that in relation to Mr. Bemis, I shall be a little more particular, and give the facts in his case a little more minutely, than I shall do in other cases. His age--the position he occupies in relation to the Press in Western New York, demands this much at my hands. Mr. B. first came to Canandaigua, 15th January, 1804, and was then about 21 years of age. His first business was the establishment of a Bookstore, being in partnership with the proprietors of the Albany Bookstore. In October of the same year, he sold out to Myron Holley, and was then induced to buy one half of the Printing establishment, for which he paid $700. In 1810, he pruchased back the bookstore of Mr. Holley, and added to the establishment a Bindery. He was also Agent for Ink Makers, Type Founders and Press Manufacturers. By the way, however, for many years he made his own Ink.

Previous to the opening of the Canal, in 1825, Mr. Bemis was very extensively engaged in the Book and Stationery business. Instead of procuring articles in either branch of business in New York, as is now the case, Merchants were very generally through the West, supplied from his establishment, swelling his sales from 20 to $30,000 a year. The whole of this immense business, aside and in connection with the other branches of industry in which he was engaged, was done under his own eye. He was thus compelled to work all day--and, to keep up the Editorial department of his paper, and his private correspondence, write half the night.

Many apprentices have gone forth from his employ, and many of them can bear ample testimony to the substantial benefits they have received, in their efforts to buffet the waves of fortune, at his hands. These efforts have always been received with favor by him, and he has never been backward in contributing to their complete success. He is the oldest representative of the Newspaper Press in Western New York, now living, and is looked upon with no little veneration and regard by those who are now actively engaged in that branch of business.

It must be recollected that in 1803, the "Repository and Advertiser" was the only medium for the distribution of the intelligence of the day, west of Utica--that its materials were rude and uncouth--yet at this establishment was done all the job work for the land offices, together with the legal and business advertising, for all the region west of Onondaga, and in some instances, from Canada. Its circulation was about 1000. The mode of circulating papers, at that day, is by no means devoid of interest--but I am disposed to let Mr. Bemis tell it in his own way:--

"Not the least interesting part of the "Repository" establishment, was the post-riding, or mode of distribution, which affords an amusing contrast to the present lightning way of doing things. The most important route, was the western, and he who supplied it was, in those days, of as great consequence as is now the superintendent of a railroad. Imagine a small, hump-back, cross-eyed, deaf--old man--and you may see honest Ezra Metcalf, who was as trustworthy as he was ugly--mounted on a skunk horse, and you have the post-rider. And now for his business: In an old-fashioned pair of saddle-bags were stowed from 150 to 200 papers. On the top of this was a small portmanteau, containing the United States Mail, with a padlock; but whether the key was entrusted to the rider, as it might safely have been, is not remembered. Thus mounted, with tin horn in hand, which he blew when he got in the saddle, he set off,

'The herald of a noisy world,

News from all quarters lumbering at his back."

"The arrival and departure of 'old uncle Ezra,' was an event, and caused a gathering of divers citizens, who felt as much anxiety about it, and what he carried and fetched, as do our citizens for the movements of the railroad cars. Errands were sent by him, and he always had some word from our neighbors who lived thirty or a hundred miles off. Once in three months he would bring from the postmasters at Fort Niagara, Lewiston, Buffalo, Batavia, and other settlements, lists of letters to be published. His route from Canandaigua and back, was as follows: first, via Boughton Hill and Mann's Mills to Northfield, and the Genesee River, which he forded. This was a point, where a tavern, a saw-mill, and a few other 'improvements' were found. Thence north to Handford's Landing, perhaps to Charlotte, at the River's mouth, where was a store-house, and a few other buildings; then back to the Ridge Road, which led by Oak Orchard to Lewiston, then down to Youngstown and Fort Niagara. Returning to Lewiston, he went up the River to the Falls, and to New Amsterdam, on Buffalo Creek, an Indian trading place, where the whites had a few stores. This was his western terminus. Homeward, he came by Four Mile Creek, Eleven Mile Creek, and Vandeventer's to Batavia, the seat of the Holland Land Company, and a place of some note; thence to Ganson's Settlement, the Genesee River through Hartford, Charleston, and Bloomfield, and Canandaigua, where he was waited for every Saturday, having been five days in performing his circuit."

This is a primitive picture, but many is the man and the woman still living, who can bear witness to its truthfulness--who can well remember the almost feverish anxiety with which the day of the coming of "old Ezra" was looked for by the tenants of this vast wilderness, and the joy or sorrow he was wont to bring among them, according to the tenor of the despatches of which he was the bearer. The above is also a picture of early Printing in Western New York. I can only hope that Mr. Bemis, one of its earliest pioneers, may yet long be spared amongst us, as a noble monument of fair and upright dealing--and that when he shall be finally gathered to his fathers, he may be welcomed with, "well done, good and faithful servant."

Printing may be said to have been introduced into the Colonies of America, in January, 1639, for in that year a Press and Types arrived, having been shipped from England, by the Rev. Jesse Glover, who, however, died on the passage. The Printer engaged to accompany the Press from England, Stephen Daye, on arriving at Cambridge, Mass., set up the business, and the first work that emenated from this attempt to introduce Printing into the Colonies, was the "Freeman's Oath," which was followed by an Almanac. To show the favorable light in which this undertaking was viewed, at that early day, the following may be taken as evidence. It is from the records of the General Court of Massachusetts:

"Att a General Court held att Boston, on the eighth Day of the eighth moneth, 1641, Steeven Daye being the first that sett upon Printing, is graunted 300 acres of land, where it may be convenient without prejudice to any town."

Printers at that early day, like those of the Craft in more modern times, were by no means exempted from the ills of life--for in 1642, it appears from the Records that Daye was under the necessity of pledging one of his lots in Cambridge, to secure the payment "for a cow, calf, and heifer"--that in 1643, for some dereliction of duty, the particulars of which are not stated, the "Court ordered that Steeven Daye, shall be released, giving 100 pounds bond for his appearance." In 1649, he becoming embarrassed with debts, was succeeded by Samuel Green. In 1668, Daye died.

Richard Hill was one of those rare, odd and eccentric geniuses, so common with those who hail from the "Emerald Isle." It seems he published a paper at Ellicottville about three years, but whether it was dignified with a title or not has not transpired. Its publication depended entirely upon the fancy or caprice of Richard. It may be said to have been published semi-occasionally. If anything worthy the Editor's note happened to travel over the hills of Cattaraugus, and reach the peaceful and pleasant village of Ellicottville, out came Richard's paper, duly chronicling the events of the day--on the contrary, if there was a want of news in the market, the issue was postponed. Mr. Sill, who furnished the facts in relation to the Press in this County, tells the following story of Richard:--"Some of our citizens will remember the burning of the Court House and Jail, in 1829, and the tour of Sheriff Saxton to Albany, with a view to get a law authorizing a new building. The trip was performed so expeditiously, that it is said the embers of the house were yet smoking, when Saxton arrived with the Act authorizing a new one! So great an event was celebrated by a general jubilee.--Dick, it is said, on this occasion, got so full of glee, that on returning home at night, he mistook Dr. Ward's house for his own, and cried out to Mrs. Ward, supposing her to be his wife, 'Kape quiet--I say, kape quiet, Kate; Saxton has got home with the Court House in his pocket, and we shall have some news for the papers.'" It is related of him that he was one day discovered in the very literary pursuit of endeavoring to yoke a pig--the modus operandi was truly original. He bored a hole in a board, and then set to work driving it on over the nose, endeavoring thereby to stretch the hole to the capacity of the pig's neck! Richard's ideas in this matter did not coincide with those of the pig, and he abandoned the attempt in despair. His aspiration for Editorial fame succeeded no better than his attempt to yoke the pig, and he abandoned the enterprize.

Re Printing in Colonies.

From the time the first newspaper was published in 1704 to 1775, being a period of seventy-one years, 78 different papers were printed in the colonies, and just one-half of them were suspended before 1775. As remarkable as it may appear, 16 of them were either conducted or published by women! being near one quarter, either directly or indirectly controlled by ladies! What is more to their credit, with one exception, those in existence prior to or at the time of the Revolution, favored Liberty. Two of these ladies were Colony Printers, and two of them State Printers after the Revolution in New York and South Carolina. And more; every Printer in the Colony of Rhode Island, was a champion for equal rights, while in other States many were vacillating. You can set that down to the credit of little Rhoda, the land of freedom in religious opinions--the land that sheltered Roger Williams.

As the last toasts at all public dinners are usually given to Woman, I wish you to bear in mind the women of our craft--the help-mates and pioneers of the press in this country. A brief sketch of them may not be uninteresting, particularly at this time, when the "Rights of Women" are publicly discussed.

Anne Franklin.--The first paper printed in Rhode Island, was at Newport, in 1732. James Franklin, a brother to the Doctor, was publisher. He died soon after, and his widow continued the business several years. She was printer to the colony, supplied blanks to the public offices, published pamphlets, etc. The Newport Mercury, which is now regularly issued, was given out of this printing office in 1756, and is the oldest paper in the country. In 1745, Mrs. F. printed for the government an edition of the laws, containing 340 folio pages. She was aided in her office by her two daughters. They were correct and quick compositors and very sensible women. A servant of the house usually worked at press. Gregory Dexter, an early settler of Providence, usually worked for her when she had a large job or an almanac to get out. It seems printing with type was not her only business. Read her advertisement:

"The printer hereof, prints linens, calicoes, silks, etc., in figures, very lively and durable colors, and without the offensive smell which commonly attends linen printed here."

Mrs. Sarah Goddard, was also a printer at Newport in 1776. She was born in Rhode Island, and widow of Giles Goddard, a printer of New London. She received a good education, and was well acquainted with many branches of literature. She had the management of a newspaper, and conducted it with much ability for two years, when John Carter associated with her, under the firm of Sarah Goddard & Co.

Mrs. Margaret Draper was the widow of Richard Draper. She published the Massachusetts Gazette and Boston News Letter, after his death. It was the first paper established in North America. All the newspapers excepting hers, ceased to be published when Boston was besieged by the English. She left Boston with the British army and went to England, where a pension was settled upon her by the government, for life.

Mrs. Cornelia Bradford was the widow of Andrew Bradford, who died in Philadelphia, in 1742. She continued the printing business for a number of years, and retired with a sufficiency of 'worldly lucre.'

In the same city, Mrs. Jane Aitkin, at the death of her father, in 1802, continued the business. Her reputation was high, from the productions which issued from her press. She was also noted for her correctness in proof-reading.

Mrs. Zenger, the widow of John P. Zenger, who published the second newspaper established in New York, carried on the business for years after his death. She was a modest and moderate woman; the exact reverse of her husband, who managed to have as many libel suits on hand, as a certain literary character of our time. The consequence was, Zenger got into full intimacy with the prisons for giving public utterance to his liberal views. Mrs. Z. conducted the "New York Weekly Journal" with ability for three years until 1748.

Mrs. Mary Holt, widow of John Holt, and publisher of the "New York Journal," in 1703, was appointed printer to this State. The paper did powerful service during the revolution.

Anne Katharine Greene, was born in Holland. In 1767, she succeeded her husband in publishing the Maryland Gazette, the first paper printed in that State. She executed the Colony printing, and continued the business to her death, in 1775.

Mrs. Hassebotch.--The first printer in Baltimore was Nicholas Hassebotch. He was succeeded by his widow, who done up business with expedition. In 1773, a missionary had a Bible in his hand, explaining it to a party of Indians. He pronounced it to be "the Gospel--the truth--the word of God." "What," said one of them, "did the Great, All Powerful make this Book?" "Yes," replied the missionary, "it is his work." The Indian taking the literal import of the words, answered indignantly, "I believe it to be a great lie. I go to Baltimore last month, when I see Dutch woman make him. The great spirit want no more Dutch man to help him."

Mrs. Mary Katharine Goddard, was sister to

Wm. Goddard of Rhode Island, who established the Maryland Journal. Coming from a State where free toleration was allowed, he was apt to write rather harshly. He was several times mobbed, and had finally to quit the State and return to Providence. His sister Mary conducted the paper for eight years, took in job work and acted as postmaster until 1784. She was spirited in her writings, and nothing but her sex saved her from frequent flagelations.

Mrs. Hannah Boyle, published a paper at Williamsburgh, Va., in 1774. It favored the Crown and lived but a short time.

Clementine Bird, succeeded her husband in the Virginia Gazette in 1773. T.W. Jefferson was a contributor. She died in 1775.

Mrs. Elizabeth Timothee, after the death of her husband in 1773, continued publishing the Gazette in Charleston, S.C. She conducted the press two years, when her son took it.

Anne Timothee, the widow of the son of Elizabeth, just mentioned, after the revolutionary war ceased, revived the Gazette, which had been established by the elder Timothee. It had been discontinued while the British troops were in possession of Charleston. She was appointed printer to the State, and held the office until 1792.

Mary Crouch, was the widow of Charles Crouch, and born in Rhode Island. Her husband established a paper in opposition to the Stamp act in Charleston, S.C. Mrs. C. continued the paper until 1780, when she removed to Salem, Mass., and took her press and type with her. She published a paper at Salem for some years, and returned to Providence, with a purse sufficient for "creature comforts" during her life.

Penelope Russell succeeded her husband in printing the "Censor" at Boston in 1771. She not only set the type, but while at her case, invoked her muse and put up type on tragical events in an interesting manner, without any written copy.

In Connecticut, Mrs. Watson, the widow of Ebenezer Watson, who died in 1777, continued one of the publishers of the Courant at Hartford for two years, when a gentleman of "steady habits" took her as a sleeping-partner. The Courant is still published.

There are other female printers of the last century, but I have now wearied your patience.

Permit me to remind you, that while drinking to the memory of the Fathers of the Fraternity in this country, to give the Mothers of the Art an extra bumper.

Respectfully yours,

J. Snow.

Clipping: Poem, by Delia Scrantom.
Original Poetry is so rarely offered us, that we borrow from 'Truth's Telegraph' the following pretty stanzas, written by a young member of one of the very respectable female seminaries of this city. When this shall meet the eye of the writer and her associates, we hope she and they may consider themselves invited to become contributors to the Olio--in short articles of either poetry or prose. We like to encourage the literary efforts of the young.

THE WANDERER'S DREAM.

He wandered o'er the earth's domain, a sad and blighted thing,--
O'er oceans deep, and forests wide, then home on Fancy's wing;
Without a place to lay his head, upon a hostile strand,
He stretched his weary limbs upon the hot, deceptive sand.

But Fancy wove her web as light around his stricken soul
As when in infancy he thought to reach ambition's goal:
She painted to his slumbering eye the scenes from which he roved,
And in his dream he heard again the voices he had loved.

He saw the beaming eyes that cheered his bright and cloudless youth,
And gazed upon the glowing cheeks of Innocence and Truth.
A father's voice again he heard, a mother's tearful eye
Again as softly beamed on him, again he heard her sigh.

Again a brother's tenderness awoke the silent string
That in his soul had slumbered since his life's Elysian spring:
He placed upon a sister's head wreaths for her natalday,
And saw the chosen one to whom she gave her heart away.

He pressed the hand, and kissed the lip he loved in early years,
Ere clouds of mis'ry had dissolved in agonizing tears;
He saw that fairy form once more among the flowerets glide,

As when in past, returnless hours she bounded by his side.

But suddenly "a change came o'er the spirit of his dream,"
And dark'ning mists obscured the glow of Fancy's transient gleam.
The voices he so lately heard are hushed and silent now,
The kiss that he so late had felt, fled from his throbbing brow.

The forms of life so lately seen were laid within the tomb,
Cut down to earth in all the light of loveliness and bloom.
He woke,--to know that those bright scenes lay far beyond the wave,
And wished that he had rested in a green and early grave.

He bent his footsteps homeward, o'er the forest and the sea,
For his crushed spirit longed once more a cherished thing to be;
Longed for the home that once was his, in days ere hopes were riven,
When all his visions of repose pointed to homes in Heaven.

But ah! that home, too, like his dream, had known a saddened change;
His childhood's friends had passed away, and faces cold and strange
Gazed heartlessly upon his wan, and pale and furrow'd brow:
But not a sound of former years awoke its silence now.

He wandered to the burial ground, and hushed his broken heart,
Beside the flow'ry mound where slept his spirit's counterpart.
The matin bird caroled his dirge, and strangers tolled the bell
That rung, unheeded and unwept, the wand'rer's funeral knell.

Clipping: Silas Wright. From Buffalo Express, Friday, Aug. 27th, 1847.

The death of Mr. Wright will produce a profound sensation throughout the length and breadth of the land. Rarely, if ever, have we seen such universal manifestations of regret at the loss of an active, partizan politician. But Mr. Wright was one of a million. Although a decided party ----, his calm, unruffled temper, his dignified ------ manners, and the uniform respect and courtesy which characterized his bearing, both public and private, precluded the idea of personal animosity. His career in the Senate will ever be remembered with admiration. He was a model of Senatorial propriety and decorum. It has been well said that there was in all his movements an air of quietness and resolution, of modesty and mildness, never to be found in a public man, unless accompanied by great intellectual strength, of which he is fully conscious. His logical powers were quite equal to those of any man that we have ever heard address the Senate. As an ingenious, adroit and able advocate of any measure under consideration, he had no superior. It was a common remark among those accustomed to witness his parliamentary displays, that his premises once admitted, mortal ingenuity could not overthrow his reasoning. He so compacted his argument, that it could never be successfully assailed, except by taking away the foundation. It was as the leader of an administration majority, that his great abilities and consummate tact and skill most commanded one's admiration. He was a diligent, laborious student, and no great subject ever came up for discussion upon which he was not thoroughly informed, and did not fully illustrate. The Senate was his great sphere of honor and usefulness. Of this he was well aware, and he left it with the deepest reluctance.

But in addition to the regret produced by the untimely death of such a man, the position of parties, the relations between Mr. Wright and the great democratic party of the country, and the expectations founded upon his abilities and character, in an anticipated exigency, invest this mournful event with extraordinary interest. It would be out of place now to speculate upon its political consequences; but it is impossible not to forsee that it may work an entire change in the aspect of affairs within the next year.

Clipping: Destructive Conflagration! St. Paul's Church a Heap of Ruins!
July 25, 1847.

It becomes our painful duty to announce the destruction of St. Paul's, or Grace Church, by fire, Sunday morning, July 25th, 1847, about two o'clock, the flames were discovered issuing from the belfry just above the roof of the building, and in a few minutes so strong was the current of air, that the entire steeple was enveloped in flames. The fire spread with great rapidity to other portions, and the whole interior was in a blaze in an incredible short space of time.

The Fire Department were promptly on the ground, but it was found impossible to save any thing but the surrounding buildings. The Library of the Church, we understand, had been removed, but the books in the body of the building, were not got out.

The splendid Organ of the Society, as also the massive Bell, were both destroyed, the latter having been melted. The cost of the two was something like $2000. The outer walls of the Church, which are of cut stone, are considerably injured, but remain standing. Everything upon the inner portion was consumed.

While the building was burning there was a rumor in the crowd that the fire was the work of an incendiary, but the probability is, that the fire took from a light carried into the tower by the Sexton. At 9 o'clock he rang the bell, taking a lamp with him to the steeple, and although he undoubtedly exercised his customary prudence, a spark from his light, or something of the kind, must have been left in the tower unobserved, and produced the disastrous result which followed.

The loss to the congregation must be something like $20,000 or $25,000, $10,000 of which is covered by insurance; $4,000 in one company and $3,000 each in two others.

It is asserted by those who were first on the ground, and who were in the vicinity that the ponderous bell of the church itself gave the first alarm--some one having run to the rope as soon as the fire was discovered. Thus before its destruction it tolled its own doom!

The buildings upon either side of the church, although standing within a few feet of it, were saved, though somewhat damaged, the thick stone walls of the edifice having protected them from the heat. That of Mr. Daniel Graves, on the south side, was but slightly injured. A large double dwelling house owned by Levi A. Ward, on the north side of the church, and occupied by Mr. George Wales, and by Mrs. Mary Till, as a boarding house, had the roof nearly burnt off. Cinders lodged upon it from the burning building to the depth of two or three inches. The roofs of other buildings in the neighborhood were slightly damaged by the burning cinders.

The church has been a very unfortunate one. Twice the immense tower, which was originally carried to a great heighth, has fallen to the ground; and this together with other disasters, has rendered it peculiarly unfortunate.

Clipping: Daily Advertiser, Wednesday morning, Sept. 1, 1847. Death of Mr. Wright.

An extra from the Ogdensburgh Republican, which we copy, gives the particulars of Mr. Wright's brief illness and death. It would seem that the locality of the disease was in the region of the heart, although it is termed "apoplexy." The Atlas states that before night of the day of his decease the intelligence was communicated by Telegraph as far as Boston, South to Richmond, Va., West to Columbus, Ohio; and to all the intermediate stations.

We quote from the Argus an extract evincing a degree of local popularity attaching to Mr. Wright at his entry upon public life which we believe to be unprecedented:

It is now twenty-four years since Mr. Wright entered upon what is known as his public career. In the fall of 1823, he was nominated as the democratic candidate for the Senate, in the then fourth senate district of this state. Until then he was scarcely known beyond his own county, and beyond the favorable endorsement of his friend, the late Roger Skinner, with whom he had read law. The district had been decidedly of federal politics, and the success of the democratic nominee was an event not anticipated. It was regarded as hopeless, when the returns having come in from all the counties except St. Lawrence, it was known that Gen. Mooers, of Essex, his competitor, went into that county several hundred ahead. St. Lawrence, then of comparitively scarce population, had been in its majorities uniformly of federal, politics, and of course adverse to Mr. Wright; and to those who abroad were watching the contest, offered little hope that, whatever might be the local partiality for the candidate from their county, it could overcome any considerable adverse vote in other parts of the district. That county, however, gave Mr. Wright every vote save twenty, and by that extraordinary expression of partiality and confidence, ensured his success, in his first canvass, by more than eleven hundred majority.

Clipping: Silas Wright is Dead! From the Ogdensburgh Republican Extra of the 27th.

A deep gloom is spread over the countenances of all our citizens. The melancholy intelligence was received today from Canton, of the death of Ex-Governor Wright. He died at his residence in Canton, this morning at 10 o'clock, in the 53d year of his age, Friday Aug. 27th, 1847.

About half-past eight o'clock, A.M., Mr. Wright called at the Post office, apparently in his usual health. While seated in a chair at the Post Office, reading a letter, the young man, clerk in the office, who was alone, perceived that he had dropped the letter, and appeared as if seized by a sudden pain. He was alarmed and enquired of Mr. Wright what was the matter? Mr. Wright, putting his hand to his heart, replied that he was suffering extreme pain in the chest--that he had twice before within the week felt similar pain, and that upon sitting down, it passed away. But this was most severe--he felt it passing into his left arm and to his neck. He rose and went to the door to go home, but returned to his seat and desired the young man to go or send for Doctor Clark. The young man sent for Dr. Clark, who soon came into the office and gave Mr. Wright some medicine, which seemed to relieve him, and Mr. Wright, accompanied by the Doctor, walked home a few rods from the office.

The Doctor remained with Mr. Wright at his house some time, and left him lying upon his bed in a gentle perspiration, supposing him to be better. Very soon after he had left him, a message reached Doctor Clark that Mr. Wright was dying and before the Doctor reached the house he was dead.

The funeral took place from his late residence in Canton, at one o'clock, P.M., on Sunday last.
